But Bill Clinton knows that America must keep moving forward and with President Obama at the helm of this nation.

There's always been a soft spot in our heart for former President Bill Clinton.

His keynote speech at the Democrat National Committee convention in Charlotte, North Carolina last week in support of President Barack Obama shows why Bill Clinton is "the man."

Clinton came onto the stage before a throng of enthusiastic Democrats to nominate Barack Obama for a second term of office. As a former American president, Clinton showed "our community" why our faith in him as Commander-in-Chief was well deserved.

The DNC convention in Charlotte, North Carolina portended to be a "cross road" leading to the re-election of President Obama."

Bill Clinton knocked the ball out of the ball park in making a case for giving President Obama another four years in office.

Clinton's remarks were not only on point, but illustrated him as a selfless iconic American political figure who believes in this nation and that President Obama deserves another term in office.

To be sure, Clinton wanted his wife, Hillary, to grab the Democrat nomination for president in 2008.

It didn't turn out the way he expected.

That’s serious “class.”

And “our community” will never, ever forget Bill Clinton.
