Fifth Third Bancorp today announced several changes to executive roles and responsibilities.

Beginning today, through the end of the year, Mary Tuuk, executive vice president and current Chief Risk Officer, will be transitioning from that role to a business management role as the market president of Fifth Third Bank (Western Michigan). Bruce Lee, executive vice president, will become Chief Credit Officer for the Bancorp and will assume responsibility for Commercial and Consumer Credit, which were formerly part of Enterprise Risk Management. He will retain his oversight of the Special Assets Group. Paul Reynolds, executive vice president and Chief Administrative Officer, will transition to Chief Risk Officer. He will also continue to oversee the company's Legal, Fair Lending and Community Reinvestment, Mergers & Acquisitions Integration, and Government Affairs functions.

About these changes, Kevin Kabat, president and chief executive officer, said, "Mary Tuuk has played a paramount role in guiding our Company through the credit and risk challenges experienced during the crisis, and I want to thank her and her team for the critical contributions they have made to position our company with a strong risk framework and culture. Mary has always had a deep desire to broaden her expertise to include P&L leadership, and I believe taking on this leadership position in one of our largest markets will be a significant benefit to Fifth Third.

"Bruce Lee has provided tremendous leadership since joining Fifth Third in 2001 and has been instrumental in building the Special Assets workout function for the Bancorp during the crisis. I have every confidence that Bruce will bring the same level of leadership to his expanded role.
